The bilateral meeting of the Minister of National Defence, Mircea Dușa, and his counterpart, Mr. Moshe Ya'alon, the Defence Minister of the State of Israel took place on Tuesday, 24 June, in the context of the Romanian-Israeli Reunion at intergovernmental level, organized in Jerusalem over 23 and 24 June.

The two defence ministers started their bilateral talks with an analysis of the security situation in Ukraine. Mircea Dușa noted that the presidential elections of 25 May in Ukraine, that resulted in the election of Petro Poroșenko as chief of state, is beneficial to the consolidation of central administration and strengthening of legitimacy of the state.

Related to the Ukraine crisis, the Romanian defence minister informed his counterpart of the reassurance measures on NATO's eastern flank. The developments of the security situation of Syria and Iraq were another topic approached during the discussions.

Minister Mircea Duşa said the situation in Syria seems volatile and unpredictable, with a probability of worsening. „The conflict in Syria can affect the countries in the region, especially Lebanon and Iraq”, the Romanian defence minister pointed out. During their discussions, the two ministers also discussed the stage of the bilateral relations, when Minister Mircea Duşa appreciated that the visit was a good opportunity to further cooperation „in an international context that compels countries sharing common interests to consolidate their dialogue by adding a pragmatic touch to it”.

Another topic of discussion was cooperation in the field of intelligence. Signing a new agreement between the two institutions on the mutual protection of classified information „will complete the legal framework of the Romanian-Israeli bilateral cooperation”, the Romanian defence minister pointed out. The agreement will offer a better way of approaching challenges to regional and Euro-Atlantic security.

The agenda of the bilateral meeting also included identifying cooperation opportunities at service level and military education in the Navy. In turn, Minister Moshe Ya’alon pointed out that this year’s anniversary of 10 years since the establishment of the Mediterranean Dialogue with NATO is an opportunity for Israel to reiterate its commitment to counter terror and proliferation of weapons of mass destruction.

“CETATEA 2014” – a test for the C&I equipment newly procured by the Romanian Armed Forces

The technical, specialty exercise „CETATEA 2014”, assessed the components of the communications and information system of the Romanian Armed Forces, took place in units of all services and supported commands across the country, over 17 to 26 June.

Its goal was to train military specialty structures in planning, designing, implementing, managing, operating, maintaining, providing C&I services and ensuring the information security of the systems.

An evaluation was also made of the implementation solutions of new information networks, services and command and control applications with a view to sustaining military operations in support of the population affected by calamities, by developing C&I capabilities.

The exercise was also a good opportunity for testing the C&I equipment newly procured by the Romanian Armed Forces, especially those used in multinational exercises and operations and for training staff officers in using NATO standards and procedures.

Exercise „CETATEA 2014” that was attended by similar structures of the Defence, Public Order and National Security System was based on a scenario that imply managing possible civil emergencies in the aftermath of a calamity, that call for the involvement of the military in support of the actions taken by the Ministry of the Interior.

The exercise is conducted on an annual basis, as part of the Plan with the main activities of the General Staff.
